Anh Nguyen

MA Applied Criminal Justice and Criminology
Year of graduation: 2024

Whilst studying her MA Applied Criminal Justice and Criminology at Swansea University, Anh, originally from Vietnam, engaged with a range of employability support services; including completing the Career Development Course and attended a series of workshops and events, jointly organised between Swansea Employability Academy (SEA) and the Faculty of Humanities & Social Sciences Employability Team.

The careers support available helped Anh expand her employability skills, including developing a CV and cover letter, interview practise and the social media use for job hunting. As an international student, Anh was keen to gain experience and tailor her existing CV and work experience for the UK jobs market.

On engaging with the support available, Anh said:

“ I decided to complete the Career Development Course as ‘I would like to enhance various practical skills for my future career such as designing CV, writing cover letters and practicing interview.

I also attended workshop sessions on interview skills, building a LinkedIn account and public speaking. The presentations during these sessions are so clear and detailed, providing all practical elements that I can apply right away for some internship applications.

The instructors from SEA are so supportive and thoughtful, which I feel encouraged to share and ask for help.
